

Rules and Regulations ECCE

with new draft article on page 3

According to ECCE Statutes Art. 19, this document reflects the decisions taken by the members of ECCE as put into words by the General meeting and the Committee Meeting. New decisions can be taken, which overrule the old ones.

Statutes ECCE:

Rules and Regulations:

Article 19.

The General Meeting decides on the rules and regulations which cannot contain stipulations that are contrary to these articles of association and in which arrangements are made that are necessary or desired in the view of the committee or General Meeting.

The working out of the statutes on main points has been summarized in one document, which is easily to be changed by the General Meeting. The last version was adopted by the members in the General Meeting of May 2009. Time and the way of working of ECCE have been changed since then.. Rules that are not used anymore or proved to be unnecessary are left out and new draft additions are written in blue. The new version has to approved again by the General Meeting.

Quotations from the statutes are italicized and put into a frame. Annexed to these quotations the concerned rules and regulations give the working-out.

Rules and Regulations:

Criteria for membership

The criteria for membership are based on the articles of association.

European organizations can become full members if they fulfil the following criteria:

- They have as its purpose the promotion of the interests and needs of people with special needs (Article 3),
- The essential basis for their work are the ideas and impulses of anthroposophical curative education and social therapy (Article 3),
- They represent organisations on a national or supra-national level,
- They agree with the rights and obligations of the membership (Article 8).

Members are committed to pay an annual contribution as is determined by the General Meeting (Article 8). By joining the association the members acknowledge awareness of the contents of the articles of association, the rules and regulations, together with the stipulations laid down in the decisions taken and/or agreements made).

Observers (Art. 4.1d, 5.4.1 and 5.4.2) are free from paying the annual contribution as mentioned in art. 8.1

2. Committee and office

Statutes:

Article 11.

The committee is entrusted with fulfilling the business of the association.

The committee is authorised to enter into all agreements other than those stipulated in art. 11 pt 3 as authorised by the General Meeting.

The committee needs the prior approval of the General Meeting to enter into agreements concerning buying, transfer or encumberment of real estate, to enter into agreements in which the association commits itself to stand surety or severally co-debtor, makes out a cause for a third party or commits itself to standing surety for the debts of a third party. Failing this approval an appeal can be made by or against third parties.

Article 12.

The association is represented by the committee.

Rules and Regulations:

The committee has decided to be supported by an office, which is in control of the secretary

The committee works according to an internal division of tasks, which is published to the members.

Statutes

COMMITTEE MEETINGS

Article 13.

- 1. The committee meetings are held as often as the chairman, or two members of the committee deem necessary.*
- 2. The committee decides by majority vote in a meeting where at least two thirds of the number of committee members is present.*
- 3. The committee has the right to make decisions without a meeting, provided all committee members declare themselves in favour of the proposition concerned.*

draft addition to Rules and Regulations after Cee meeting Oct. 12-2014:

The Committee has taken the decision to reserve a seat in the Committee meetings to represent the International Council for Curative Education and Social Therapy, in order to structure the cooperation with the International Council. The representative of the Council has the same right to vote as each Committee member. The Coordination Group of the Council, after consultation with the ECCE Committee, decides who will occupy this seat. It might be occupied by more than one person, but it has only one vote. The period of membership remains open. The Council is responsible for the costs.

3. ECCE does not interfere in internal affairs of their members, without permission

Questions of individuals, institutions or parents' organisations which are not a direct member of ECCE will be directed to the national representative. Only after deliberation with and permission of the concerned member the Committee of ECCE may eventually decide to intermeditate.

The Committee however may communicate information, opinions and reports about members directly to the concerned member, with an advice on how to deal.

4. If a member of ECCE doesn't pay its membership contribution

Statutes:

TERMINATION OF MEMBERSHIP

Article 7.

- 1. Membership may be terminated:*
 - a. through the dissolution of the organisation concerned;*
 - b. through the resignation of an member, which should be presented in writing to the committee before the closing date of the current association year;*
 - c. by the committee giving notice on behalf of the association; this can occur when a member has failed to meet the requirements of membership stipulated in the articles of association, regulations and decisions; if he does not fulfil his obligations to the association, or if in fairness it cannot be demanded of the association to let the membership continue;*
 - d. through expulsion by the committee when a member acts contrary to the articles of association, regulations and decisions, or causes unreasonable damage to the association. A member who has been expelled remains excluded from future membership.*
- 2. An appeal against a decision of expulsion can be lodged at the General Meeting by the applicant concerned within one month of receipt of notification. During the term of the appeal and pending the hearing of the appeal the member is suspended.*

Rules and regulations:

Unfortunately ECCE is – on a regular base – confronted with members who don't pay their membership contribution. Because of changes in the representatives or in the committee of some member organisations or due to other organisational problems the attention to ECCE obligations of some members gets into a corner. ECCE however, is a low budget organisation who really needs her money and is not able to spend much energy on administrative issues.

The committee has decided to issue a policy concerning members who don't pay their contribution in time. Members who, after being reminded to pay, do not contribute their fees and cannot explain the failure thereof sufficiently before the end of the next year, run the risk of having their membership terminated by de Committee.
